

FROM YOUR COUNTY EXECUTIVE

As Cache Valley residents, we're blessed to live in a place wonderful enough to attract visitors from other counties, states and even other countries. In this edition, you'll learn about some of the things we're doing to attract visitors to the beautiful community we call home.

One of Cache County's responsibilities is to promote economic development in order to improve quality of life for our residents. These efforts lead to lower taxes, new employment opportunities, and stronger local businesses.

Perhaps the best form of economic development is tourism. Tourists visit, spend lots of money, often much more per day than our year-round residents, and then they go home, leaving their money behind but no longer requiring the services provided by the tax dollars they just spent. They visit restaurants, hotels, downtown businesses, theaters and outdoor attractions.

I'm thankful for our visitors and I love to meet them. I'm also thankful for those who make our community a great place for them to visit.

CACHE COUNTY HAS A VISITORS BUREAU?

My name is Julie Hollist Terrill and I'm the Director of Cache County's most exciting department, the Cache Valley Visitors Bureau and Gift Shop. Don't make the mistake of thinking our office is just for visitors, it's got even more for you! out brochures Check downloads for more info on local hiking trails, Logan Canyon, historic downtown, live arts performances, the American West Heritage Center and even a selfguided Foodie Trek and Signature Products Tour.

We've also got plenty of info to plan your trip to Utah's National Parks, Yellowstone and Jackson or destinations throughout the state.

Wait! There's more. If you're looking for postcards or Logan gifts of any sort, we've got them. No one should live without Logan cow socks, mugs, hats, shirts and great books about Cache Valley's Bigfoot and local legends, as well as history books, pocket guides, keychains and magnets, oh my!

When you think that all of the people who travel here are also shopping, eating, buying gas, going to shows and special events and spending money all along the way, it really adds up.

The Kem Gardner Research Institute says visitors to Cache County spent $222 million in 2022.

We specialize in getting people to come here on vacation, spend their money and get out. The money they leave behind saves us on taxes and supports fun events and businesses for us to enjoy year-round. Each year, we receive thousands of requests for information and visitors from all 50 states and dozens of countries.

Some locals seem to be surprised that people come here on vacation on purpose. If you don't know why, come and see us and we'll help you find the magic in your own backyard. Check out our awesome online calendar of events at explorelogan.com and please post events you're involved in so everyone can come."

Tourism Makes for a Healthy Economy

by Shawn Milne

Director of Regional Economic Development and Intergovernmental Affairs, Bear River Association of Governments

The best part of my role is learning of all the great ways that different businesses, nonprofit entities, and government work together in Cache Valley to create one of the most economically diverse and successful places within the state of Utah. We're blessed to have a vibrant economy, which means more local employment options and a great quality of life.

One of the wonderful contributions to Cache Valley's enviable economic strength is the tourism industry. From outdoor recreation, annual events and conferences, vouth competitions, as well as arts and cultural celebrations. We're home to an exciting array of options for visitors. The good news is that those visitors boost local help our businesses while keeping our property taxes lower, all while giving us the bonus of close access to entertaining and recreational options that we too get to enjoy.

79%

believe arts and culture is "important to their community's businesses, economy, and local jobs."
